BOART LONGYEAR PROVIDES PATENT LITIGATION CLARIFICATION

Boart Longyear Group Ltd (ASX:BLY) and its subsidiaries (Boart Longyear or the Company) announces clarification to the Company's market release on 2 September 2022 about the optical device patent litigation of its strategic partner, Globaltech Corporation Pty Ltd (Globaltech), against Reflex Instruments Asia Pacific Pty Ltd (Reflex), a wholly owned subsidiary of Imdex Limited.

On 3 August 2022, Boart Longyear announced Globaltech's successful enforcement of its Australian patent No. 2012297564 (for an optical device used in down hole tools and a down hole information gathering system incorporating such a device). Following that decision, Reflex made an application to the Federal Court of Australia (Court) to stay certain orders until the determination of its appeal.

On 30 August 2022, the Court made the following restraining order, effective from 30 August 2022: Reflex is restrained from making, hiring, selling, importing or exporting the infrared coupling (IR Coupling) currently in use with its EZ-GYRO and EZ-TRAC tools, and any EZ-GYRO and EZ-TRAC tools, which incorporate the IR Coupling.

The only exception to this restraining order is that for the period while Reflex appeals the outcome of the court case it may continue to hire those EZ-GYRO and EZ-TRAC incorporating the IR Coupling which are presently on hire to Australian customers.

Boart Longyear wishes to clarify that the effect of this restraining order includes that Reflex is prohibited from hiring any spare tools not on hire (as at 30 August 2022) that are located at Australian customer sites.

Globaltech, majority owned by Boart Longyear, manufactures certain instruments and equipment for the Geological Data Services division of Boart Longyear.
